

Presentations – listening for detail.

Use the space provided to take notes on what you think is significant in the first section of the recording.

NOTES

Compare your notes with your partners, have you noted down the same facts?

Questions

Use your notes to help you to answer these questions

1. What is the topic of the talk?
  2. What does he suggest is the leading view?
  3. What does he say is interesting about this view?
  4. When does he say was the first mention?
  5. What three things does David Livingston believe have created increased integration in East Africa?
-

What makes a good presentation? (or a bad one)

Good

Bad

Predictions

1. What percentage of time spent on phone calls are made inside or country or internationally?
2. What percentage of the world's population are 1st generation immigrants?
3. What percentage of investment into a country comes from outside the country?

Now listen to check.

Was there anything that surprised you?

---

The shape of the talk

Watch the first minute again, what are the three things that Ghemawat says he is going to talk about?

-
-
-

Think about how this introduction could be adapted to a presentation you might give:

Useful language:

I'm here to talk to you about

The leading view(s) on this is/are

What's interesting about this _____ is .....

Can you think of any other words which may be useful?

The shape of the talk

Which of these two shapes best describes this talk?

Situation

Introduction

Problem

1st topic

Solution

2nd topic

Evaluation

Conclusion

What does each part of the talk do, with a partner see if you can complete the table.

Part of talk	What is being said
Situation	Background / why it is useful / includes introduction. E.g. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The idea that people believe the earth is flat</li> <li>• No use of data</li> <li>• Peer pressure - people now believe the world is flat as everyone says it</li> <li>• Technological integration</li> </ul>
Problem	1  2
Solution
Evaluation

Remember

Presentations need to have an introduction which tells the listener what to expect.

Use facts and figures as examples, but don't overload the listener.

Use signposting words, or voice intonation to tell the listener about important things or to show the beginning of a new section

You need to conclude and add something that makes people think at the end.